Historical note

The Evolution/Creation Collection was created as an artificial collection by Iowa State University's Special Collections Department in the early 1980s as a response to a heightened interest of the campus community after a series of campus lectures took place on creationism and evolution. Donations were accepted from a variety of donors in order to collect a broad range of resources covering the debate. The Department no longer proactively collects materials in this area.

Collection description

The collection (1923-1996, undated) contains copies of articles, correspondence, speeches, debates, court cases, presentations, and publications relating to the evolution/creation debate and its role in public education. The bulk of the collection consists of articles, news clippings and other publications. Also included are a variety of recorded debates, both on audio and video cassettes. Publications are both from organizations and associations as well as individuals. The collection contains materials from a variety of people and organizations including the American Civil Liberties Union, Isaac Asimov, William Bennetta, Franklin Parker, Harry Bert Wagoner, Phil Gerrish, and Ian Plimer. Also included are materials from related trials. Most of the collection covers the evolution/creation debate here in the United States, but some publications also document the debate outside of the United States, such as in Australia.

A variety of records documenting the debate at Iowa State University and in the state of Iowa are in the collection, including those related to the Committees of Correspondence, Ames (Iowa) School Textbook Referendum Petition, Iowa Academy of Science, Warren Dolphin, John W. Patterson, and Stanley Weinberg. Warren Dolphin (zoology and entomology) and John Patterson (materials science and engineering) were both professors at Iowa State University. Stanley Weinberg was a high school science teacher for many years and founded the network of scientists and teachers, called the Committees of Correspondence, which were organized in many states as a structured group ready to respond to creationist initiatives.

For related collections, see the John W. Patterson Papers (RS 11/12/51), Stanley L. Weinberg Papers (MS-640), Wayne Frair Papers (MS-299), the Duane Isely Papers (RS 13/5/56), and the Iowa Academy of Science Records (MS-52).

Organization

The collection is organized alphabetically by author name or subject.
