Historical note

The Association for Women Geoscientists (AWG) was officially founded in 1977 with approximately 50 members in the Bay area of San Francisco. The first chapter formed in 1979 when a group in Denver became associated with the San Francisco group. The Bay area initially served as national headquarters for the organization as regional groups developed into recognized chapters. The Association, now headquartered at Menlo Park, California, has the following goals: 1) To encourage the participation of women in the geosciences, 2) To exchange technical, professional, and educational information, and 3) To enhance the professional growth and advancement of women in the geosciences.

Collection description

This collection (1975-[ongoing]) contains records related to the administration of the Association for Women Geoscientists (AWG). The records include administrative records, financial records, printed materials, photographs and oversize material that document AWG general operations, meetings, presentations, and chapter activities.

The administrative records include a constitution and by-laws, committee records, meeting minutes and programs, reports, agendas, chapter records and newsletters, correspondence, news clippings. These materials document AWG's projects, activities, and members. The financial records consist of account information, bank statements, grant proposals, invoices, receipts, reports, and tax records.

The printed materials consist mostly of publications which contain information on educational and career opportunities, resources for women in the geosciences, articles and clippings on feminism, discriminations, sexual harassment, and career profiles. Copies of the AWG's newsletter, Gaea, are also included along with materials from related organizations.

The collection also contains photographs and oversize materials related to AWG. The photographs include color slides, color prints (and Polaroids), black and white prints, and contact sheets. The slides are part of a 1978 presentation on careers while the prints document meetings, AWG officers, and award recipients. The oversize materials consist of posters, transparencies, photographs, and other documents.

Description of series

Series 3 Printed Materials 1976-2008, undated

extent: 187 folders

description: This series contains printed materials of interest to AWG members. The various publications discuss educational and career opportunities, resources for women in the geosciences, articles and clippings on feminism, discriminations, sexual harassment, and career profiles. There are also copies of the AWG's newsletter, Gaea, along with materials and publications from related organizations. The collection has printed materials from the Association for Women in Mathematics, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Federation of Organizations for Professional Women, Geological Society of America, History of Science Society, National Science Foundation, National Organization for Women, American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Association of University Women, Society of Women Engineers, and Women in Geography, among others. Of note are the materials documenting the Equal Rights Amendment. The series is in alphabetical order.

Description of series

Series 4 Photographs 1978-1998,
undated

extent: 1.6 linear ft. (41 folders)

description: This series contains several color slides, color prints (and Polaroids), black and white prints, and contact sheets. The slides are part of a 1978 presentation on careers while the color prints document several meetings of the Association for Women Geoscientists during the 1980s. The black and white stills were for publicity purposes and depict award recipients and AWG officers. The series is in chronological order.
